ABSTRACT

Headache is pain anywhere in the region of the head or neck. The most common type of primary headache is the tension headache. Ayurvedic texts describes not only Sirahsula as a symptom of various diseases but also as an independent disease entity as Siroroga. Acharya Charaka has mentioned Siro-ruk as a separate disease among eighty types of Vata-Vyadhis. The word Sirahsula denotes the painful condition of the head. It is termed in different ways by different Acharyas as Charaka describes it, as Siroroga, Sushruta and Bhavamishra as Sirobhhitapa and Vagbhata as Sirastapa. The Vata when aggravated due to Vata vitiating factors moves upwards, downwards and sideways causes several diseases. Sirahsula is also mentioned to be due to suppression of sneezing reflex and other natural urges. In Ayurvedic view Vata Sirahsulam can be correlated with tension headache, Pitta Sirahsulam can be correlated with migraine headache and Kapha Sirahsulam can be correlated with sinus headache. In Ayurvedic texts a detailed formulations to cure headache has been mentioned and this article is specially designed to elaborate all available references to cure headache and help the human beings through Ayurveda.

INTRODUCTION

Siroroga or the diseases of head and neck are classified into eleven types grossly. They are Vataja, Pittaja, Kaphaja, Samnipataja, Raktaja, Ksaya, Krimija, Suryavarta, Anantavata, Sankhaka and Ardhavabhedaka. If the headache is due to no apparent reason, increased at night and is relieved by fomentations and tight bandaging, it can be due to Vata. In Pitta type, severe burning sensation as if some hot coke is covered is felt in the entire cranium along with eyes and nose. It is diminished on application of cold substances and at night. In Kaphaja type, the head is clammy, gummy, rigid, heavy and cold. Eyes, nose and oral cavity are edematous. In case of Raktaja type, the features mimic that of Pittaja type and tenderness is associated. In Ksaya type due to diminished Kapha, Vasa(fat) and Raka (due to haemorrhage or injury), headache generates which is very severe and difficult to cure. The pain is enhanced by fomentations, emesis, fumigation, nasal applications and bloodletting, which are usual therapeutic procedures. There may be vertigo, pricking pain, blurred or fixed vision and muscular fatigue. The features of Krimija type are, severe pricking pain, throbbing and pulsation inside the head as if some worms are eating away the inside tissues, and emission of blood and pus through the nose. The headache which is prominent in the ocular area commences at sun rise and reaches its peak at noon.
Then it slowly regresses and subsides with sunset. This type is called Suryavarta. It subsides sometimes with cold fomentations and sometimes with hot fomentations. It is very difficult to cure and is due to involvement of all the Dosas. In Anantavata, three Dosas are vitiated. They exert pressure upon the Manya i.e. neck muscles and gradually cause pain and burning sensation in the eyebrows and temporal areas. Pain is severe in the maxillary areas. The other features are tremor, rigidity of the mandibular joint and ophthalmic disorders. In Sankhaka type, severe pain, burning sensation, redness and edema (sign of inflammation) are generated. Then the disease spreads to other areas of head and neck and kills the afflicted person, within three days. In Ardhavabhedaka type, very severe nature of cutting and striking pain is perceived in the areas of Manya (neck), eyebrows, temporal areas, forehead and eye. It is present only in either half of the area.

DISCUSSION

Ayurvedic line of treatment of Sirahsula or headache should be with Vatahara Dravyas, balancing Pitta and Kapha and applying Jvara Chikitsa concept. In case of Vata type of headache, oil massage, hot fomentations, food that pacify Vata Dosha and Upanaha are advised. Use of Sirovasti specially pacifies Vata type of headache. In case of Pitta type of headache, cool sandal water may be sprinkled along with fanning the head with water flowers like lotus or lily. Satadhouta Ghee may be applied on the scalp. Vataja headache can be due to neurological or psychological causes. Pittaja type of headache is observed in indigestion and other gastro-intestinal diseases. Kaphaja headache may be some referred pain from ear, tooth or sinuses. Here, the patient feels as his head is internally filled with some heavy material. Raktaja type is usually encountered in vascular causes like hypertension. Ksayaja condition is usually observed in cerebral ischaemia or head injury. In Krimija type, Actually, there will not be any type of grossly visible worms which cause this type of headache. It may be due to infective sinusitis. Suryavarta features are commonly observed in chronic maxillary sinusitis. Anantvata is mostly due to the involvement of the fifth cranial nerve i.e. trigeminal nerve with all its branches. The pain is felt, where ever the supply goes. Sankhaka may be headache originating from an inflammatory process such as meningitis and cerebral abscess.

CONCLUSION

It is clear from above discussion and various references that single and compound Ayurvedic formulations is very much available and may give better results when used in a proper way. By analyzing various references, available in Ayurvedic texts, it is clear that our classics are full of significant formulations to cure headache.
